They just recently moved to the L.A area to pursue their musical dream after recording their second full-length album entitled The World Was Ours on their own. This album has been receiving incredible responses from people of all ages, backgrounds, and musical genres. The reason for such positive feedback is simply because The 3 Heads are flat out great singer-songinditers. They structure their songs into 3 to 4 minute masterpieces focusing on the attention-getting melodies and harmonies, which are backed by solid driving beats and melodic guitars. Many songs on this album could be potential singles depending on what your listening for. For example, if you want an up-beat power pop song, Over Now would be the ideal choice. If you want a very attention-getting mid-tempo ballad/pop song, Times running or World Was Ours could be the song your looking for. I could go on and on about individual songs, but the bottom line is that the album as a whole is solid all the way through. People who give this album a listen seem to immediatly identify with at least a few songs. What makes the album unique is that the listeners who have purchased the album seem to have different favorite songs. Such a response is proof that that there is a song for everyone on this CD.
