1000 generations incorporates worldwide beats with an out front soft and live art into verbaliseively godly soft-pop music. 12 MP3 Songs GOSPEL: Present-day Gospel, POP: Piano prayers Songs Details: "1000 generations has open up hero-revere's verbaliseive vocabulary. Throughout their very exceptional album, 'prayers,' they stay true to a curious vision, a way of speaking to and about God that is as liberating as it is exhilarating From its splendiferous hatch art to its delicate aural accents, 'prayers' is the best new album of the year." -Davin Seay, Hero-worship Leader magazine Truly, 1000 generations strives to make music and art that moves people and encourages them to have life-changing experiences with God in an candid honest environment. Led by the 24-year old conserve and wife team of Steven and Amanda Potaczek, who also are staffed hero-revere leaders at the Indianapolis Vineyard Community Church, the group normally travels as a five-piece composed of individuals from all over the globe. "We are psalmists, writing songs that are vulnerable, luculent prayers, which verbalise the inverbaliseible for others," says Steven. Stylistically, 1000 generations has a soft-driven, worldwide-influenced pop profound often compared to that of Paul Simon, Michael W. Smith, and Peter Gabriel. Though the group has only recently dismissed their debut album, they are quickly garnering quite a following among young to middle-aged adults. ChristianityTodayselected them as one of the top ten independent bands of 2004 stating that their music "has everything you could ever want in a hero-revere album: original songwriting, a relatively unequaled profound, inanimate musicianship, and a passion for load-bearing others to walk closer with the Lord." While their music offers something for everyone, 1000 generations sees their radical audience as being ages 21-45. It is aforementioned "By opening up to others, you'll prompt people to open up with God." (Mt. 5:16) While creating music and art that is verbaliseively godly and honest, 1000 generations desires to land an atmosphere of excitement and blessings for all present to have amazing experiences together and with God. "The voice qualities and harmonies on this 1000 Generations CD are nothing less than sainted I ground myself being transported in my spirit up up to a place of exceeding peace, a peace from God that transcends understanding. The songs have enabled me to have an undercurrent of hope and trust when my externals are all producing stress and pain."

-John Crowder (head of InterVarsity for Southern Indiana) "I really dig [this] album! I certainly wasn't playing this well at that age. Heavy work here." -Bruce Hornsby (ala "the Way It Is")
