A single CD contains 24 tracks of professionally recorded, popular, hard-to-find big band/swing era music with excellent sound and quality. 24 MP3 Songs JAZZ: Big Band, JAZZ: Swing/Big Band Details: At the time Benny Goodman's band became one of the icons of great bands in 1936-1937, Artie Shaw was climbing the ladder, but in a very different way. He was an acknowledged virtuoso clarinetist, with a highly personable style. Other musicians admired him for an instrumental technique considered more facile than that of Benny Goodman. Artie Shaw, Benny Goodman and others were ready to challenge the national popularity of the Casa Loma Orchestra. Casa Loma's jazz numbers were wowing the college crowd and introducing thousands of Americans to swing. It had in Gene Gifford, one of the best arrangers of swing, and in Glen Gray, a monumentally stable leader. Raymond Scott's quintet contributed to the Swing Era also with unusual blends of rhythm, harmonies, and sound effects conceived by a man who never put his music on paper. These greats, as well as many other bandleaders, produced sounds we now consider the classic sounds of the Swing Era.
