Tyler discovers, during a very lonesome week-end at home alone, that meeting a new friend, and helping that new friend with a simple task, can lead to some very exciting actions, none of which he ever expected to happen, but was more than thankful that they did! He dumped a little more than just a truck load of trash! Two electronic store sales individuals have the experience of discovering much more at the Electronic Convention than just the electronics stuff. Two roommates that already knew the 'extra' conveniences of attending a convention, proved very, very helpful to them. Totally changed the meaning of "going to a convention together." The term 'Inter-Relationship Training' certainly did prove to have a much broader meaning than what the training program intended -- but for about six attendees, these relationships were never discussed in any of the meetings. Their company paid for some completely different types of relationship studies than what the company was ever aware. Their employees will now be working "much closer together."
