A High-Test Percussion-Driven Americana Spectacle of Devilish Proportions 12 MP3 Songs COUNTRY: Americana, FOLK: Progressive Folk Details: Tom and Sarah Kilts are the "damned duo" that make up Diablo's Dust. A devilishly eclectic collection of Lo-Fi goodness, "Living In Nowhere" is their first widely released album. In this outing, talented multi-instrumentalist Tom Kilts incorporates the baritone electric guitar, ukulele, mandolin, acoustic guitar, accordion, world percussion, and jazz organ into the mix. Sarah Kilts adds her own special brand of bass and backing vocals to the all-original songs. During live performances, Tom takes turns playing acoustic guitar, banjo and mandolin-- all the while keeping time with one foot on the a bass drum and the other pedal-kicking a block and tambourine (yes, one man can do all that at once-- and it makes for a foot stomp'n' spectacle of a good time!) Sarah plays bass, and both lend their vocals to a blend of high-test Americana/Progressive Folk originals and Old-Tymie covers. Cover art for "Living In Nowhere" designed by the L.A. based, ever-talented Tim (Silent K) Knauff.

 "Eye For An Eye" (Track 11) of Living In Nowhere, was chosen to appear in the latest issue of The Big Ugly Review, which showcases "the best emerging and established talent in writing, photography, music and film".
