Details: About Joseph JOSEPH In the age of dime-a-dozen R&B acts, it takes more than a sellable smile to achieve success on the charts. There are plenty of singers who cant dance and dancers who cant sing with number one singles, but mulit-talented acts are few and far between. Joseph, Child of the 80s born in Tifton, Georgia, is one of the rare exceptions whose talents arent determined by the sound tech in the studio. Music has played a huge part in Josephs life since childhood. I remember at birthday parties and family reunions we would have a talent show. he said, I always had a natural ear for music: as a kid I would hear a song on the radio and instantly be able to mimic the melody and arrangement even if I didnt know all the lyrics. Boy you sound just like the radio, friends and family would tell him. That innate sense of melody turned Joseph onto pursuing song more seriously. After graduating High School, Joseph joined a group of friends who formed a boy band and started performing at local school functions and even opening for some major acts like Pink, 702, Silk and others. Joseph developed his strength in songwriting and helped arrange the groups original material which they performed. In late 2002, the boys dispersed after several disappointing attempts and disagreements with management. Despite all the adversities, struggles, and failures, the young survivor didn't give up. In summer 2003 Joseph teamed up with producer and Dj Mickey Mix Bono. The two created a new ecliptic type music that would soon be the solo demo project the aspiring artist needed to showcase his talents. As a songwriter, Josephs lyrical talents are prevalent on his debut album Hook It Up. Production group The Insomniacx based in Chicago also added a few tracks and remixes as well as west coast producer Dj King Assassin. With years in the making, Hook It

Up is a solid album with even a guest appearance from Snoop Dogg, dedicated to having fun on the dance floor, and thats exactly what Joseph was trying to accomplish I wanted to give people that all-over, feel-good vibe. As Joseph continues to grow and hone his musical talents, he hopes not only to set new precedents in the music industry as a vocalist and songwriter, but in every aspect of the word artist.
