Starting from his humble beginnings as fresh-faced Los Angeles hopeful, he began his career learning the basics from distinguished businessmen, such as James Williams Guercio (Caribou Ranch/former producer/songwriter of Chicago), who later introduced him to longtime veteran of the music publishing field, Don Williams. Working in Mr. Williams' Publishing company as an A&R Manager, Robin Deeter learned many different aspects of the trade while dealing with various record labels, songwriters and producers. During that time, Robin began to lay the groundwork for his future album by collaborating with renowned producers such as Steven Bray (Madonna), The Triangle (BAHAMEN), and Tom Harriman (Aaron Carter/Popular). Also at that time, he learned the creative and marketing aspects of pitching songs by working as a songwriter himself and writing alongside established writers, such as Richard Feldman (Eric Clapton/Kenny Rogers), Christian B (Celine Dion), and Fernando Garibay (Enrique Iglesias). With the knowledge he has gained and the reputation he has earned as one of the rare up-front and honest hardworking music professionals, he is ready to place his mark in the Music Entertainment Business.
