"This is the poetry of addiction, of self-destructive nights in corner bars, and of lives built around the oblivion of sex, music and chemically fueled escapism. . ." 14 MP3 Songs SPOKEN WORD: With Music, SPOKEN WORD: Poetry Details: Imagine Scranton, Pennsylvania, a town once famous for its anthracite, prostitution and burlesque shows until the coal, iron and railroad industries pulled out, leaving it economically wounded - but with a rich cultural heritage that shaped its values. Backed by Northeast PA favorites Mighty Fine Wine, "Last night's cigarettes. . ." blows the dust off the things that often go unnoticed in a working class community: the people who live there, the choices they've made, and the ultimate price they pay for having made them. This is the poetry of addiction, of self-destructive nights in corner bars, of lives built around the oblivion of sex, music and chemically fueled escapism. It's the music of parking lots, written with the engine running - on an evening in May like a page ripped from November.
