Details: "Music is my canvas, and I paint what my heart and soul feels." Fred Deaguero, Jr.'s debut music CD, "NOCTURNAL TIDES," is a smooth and relaxing blend of twelve (12) original New Age/Instrumental music selections, for all ages. The music on this CD has been said to not only calm, but also stir the imagination of places afar or having one reflect upon tapestries of their life. Influenced by such artists as Jim Brickman, John Tesh, Kenny G., and David Sanborn, just to name a few, Fred's debut music release not only features his songwriting talents, but also shows his abilities to solely perform, develop, mix and produce music. Beginning with the picturesque "Scenic Passages", leading to the upbeat instrumental "What A Wonderful Day", and progressing to his light but moderate styling of "Until There Came You", and drifting to the mesmerizing sounds and music in "Gentle Wind", "Twilight Echoes", and "Nocturnal Tides", a sense of relaxation will take place, that leads you to an ultimate state of calm by the last song, "Till We Meet Again (A Tribute and Remembrance)". Although having written over 100 songs, and played music for over 30 years, Fred looks upon himself as being an "unknown musician." Over the years, family and friends have encouraged him to accomplish what he has now finally done - release an album for everyone to hear. In fact, some years ago, Fred publicly performed on the keyboard, clarinet, and trombone. He even competed in a music contest (held aboard a military base he was stationed, when in the active military), placing sixth in a field of over two dozen performers. Fred is currently working on his next music CD, scheduled for release in Spring of 2006. This debut music CD available worldwide with a number of online digital music companies. Go ahead, give a listen. We believe you will be pleasantly surprised with this solo CD production by Fred Deaguero, Jr.
