Details: Uplifting Electronica / Chillout 100 Homegrown Grooves and Soundscapes Composer and percussionist Mark Preston first made a name for himself playing drums for bands in the Mid-Atlantic club scene. Preston then relocated to inner city Boston and traded his rock 'n' roll for music of a different beat. Inspired by the downtempo grooves of Japan's Caia and the ambient chamber rock of California's The Album Leaf, he began creating atmospheric music full of textural builds and intensive beats. In the spring of 2006, Preston was awarded a four-month residency at the Contemporary Music Center, the nation's only artists' colony for musicians and entertainment industry executives on the island of Martha's Vineyard, MA. "...and it will rise with the sun" represents Preston's first year working with digital music. With the release of this album, Preston hopes to meet and connect with other like-minded musicians.
