Details: The Restoration Project is a vision of musical and artistic partnership. It is founded upon the eternal hope of a loving creator and a belief that artists able to express anything about this hope and creator become a vehicle for spiritual and relational restoration. Tracy Howe, visionary and lead artist of the group, was born in Boulder, CO and now live in a small mountain town called Woodland Park, CO. In the last seven years, she has worshipped (and most of the time was leading worship) with over 300 groups, in multiple countries and three different languages. The Restoration Project, has also maintained an active tour schedule in general market venues but Tracy continues to work with a diverse cross section of the body and in her current season she has been focused on deepening relationships with a handful of communities in the US and South America, developing and sharing international resources (she speaks and leads worship in Spanish and Portuguese as well) and exploring alternative and sustainable models of touring and artistry that release people into their work, regardless of socio--economic situations or community size.
