

Mp3 Jubal Cain - Current

Jubal Cain plays modern rock that leans at a slight angle, and carries the occasional Parental Warning Advisory. 10 MP3 Songs ROCK: Modern Rock, ROCK: Progressive Rock Details: Jubal Cain put together Current after the dreaded "concept album" materialized from the songs they were writing. The concept? You decide. It has something to do with madness, or the gradual acceptance of that condition. Remember Col. Kurtz in "Apocalypse Now"? Something like that. The band itself is a collective of creative people, but the numbers go up and down through time depending on who is currently plugged in. "Current" is written and performed by Ashworth and Patin, but in the real world, not to be confused with the recording studio world, Conrad Rivera is the drummer, and David Roy is the bass player (although Roy is currently residing on the "unable to perform" list due to prior commitments to War). For the more or less true biographical information on these folks, we suggest you point your browser to the Official Website, jubalcain.com. "Current" is representative of the Jubal Cain ethic that good music doesn't have to fit into any particular tabbed slot in the bins at your favorite record shop. It would help if there were a section at that record store for atonal free-form jazz/electronic country and western/oddball metal/prog/roots rock, but that may be asking too much. You think? "Current" is bound to contain a little bit of everybody's favorite music (if your favorite music has credits for "bicycle horn", "fake marathon runner", and "Hammond tuba") and Jubal Cain sees no reason to mess with that formula. Take it for a few spins and let it soak into your head.
