Details: Robert Madole was born and raised in the high desert of Northern Nevada, where he resides to this day. He is married and the father of three. While he never drew a paycheck from a ranch, He was raised around livestock and never missed a rodeo while growing up in and around Reno. He served in the Navy Seabees in Viet Nam, and has a deep rooted sense of patriotism. He has written and recorded several songs and numerous pieces of cowboy poetry, the common denominators in his work are God, country, and family, and he always tips his Stetson to the members of our armed forces. His first song "In The Shade of The Liberty Tree" was written two weeks before 9/11, while driving a drill rig across Nevada. His work is a breath of fresh air in a world moving all too quickly away from all the things which are really important in this life.
