He began playing guitar and 5-string banjo and quickly excelled at both instruments. He briefly performed in a duo with the folk musician Woody Guthrie. Later, he helped form THE NEW LOST CITY RAMBLERS, with Mike Seeger and John Cohen. This group inspired a greater mainstream interest in traditional old-time music, without altering the tradition of it. John Cohen once remarked that the Ramblers considered their live concerts primarily as opportunities to share great old songs they had discovered with their fellow folk performers. After the breakup of the original band, Paley formed the OLD RELIABLE STRING BAND (w/ Roy Berkeley and Artie Rose.) The NLCR continued on with Tracy Swartz replacing Paley. Tom moved to Sweden, where he lived for three years, from 1963 until 1965, before moving to England, where he has resided ever since. He continues to tour in America and various parts of Europe both solo as well as with other musicians
