A witches' brew of absinthe-fueled electro-industrial-metal mayhem from Tupelo, Mississippi, the birthplace of Elvis Presley 11 MP3 Songs ELECTRONIC: Industrial, METAL: Industrial Metal Details: Tupelo, Mississippi: The quaint Southern town that has given birth over the years to Elvis Presley, the American Family Association, and more recently, Cockfight Club. Clearly, Tupelo will be the site of the final battle between Good and Evil in the coming apocalypse. And Cockfight Club is ready... Cockfight Club is the recording project of Kenneth Niles Calloway: musician, Mac enthusiast, sci-fi horror movie buff, and all-around loose cannon. After spending years honing his programming and sequencing skills on various techno projects, sometime in 2003 Kenneth decided it was time to rock and dusted off his trusty Gibson Flying V. Cockfight Club was born. Drawing from a vast pool of musical influences including rock, punk, metal, industrial, techno, electro, new-wave, 80's synth-pop, and all points in between, Kenneth descended into Area 52, his newly-built basement studio, and spent the next two years cooking up a witches' brew of absinthe-laced musical misanthropy. The first Cockfight Club album, "ber gber", was finally released in 2005 on Ken's own Weapons-Grade Records label, and just in time for Halloween! There was much rejoicing. While primarily a solo project, several of the area's most talented musicians have contributed to the electro-industrial-metal mayhem that is Cockfight Club, and rumors persist that a Cockfight Club live show is currently under development. Like Elvis, Cockfight Club's mission is to start a rock and roll revolution, to gyrate their pelvises in front of as many women as possible, and to strike a staggering blow below the Bible Belt. Stay tuned.
