Details: Theres a special vibe, magic and dispensation that can only occur when women gather together in perfect unity. More than fifty of them lend their talents to this epic undertaking that celebrates all thats good, right and wonderful about bluegrass music. The Daughters of Bluegrass have created a powerful, unstoppable high- lonesome juggernaut that is not only capable of leaping tall buildings in a single bound, but also poignantly and poetically ripping out hearts, dropping all within earshot to their knees, creating cold chills and injecting weary souls with joyous rapture. And, by the way, absolutely no men were employed (or harmed) in the making of this record. Chris Stevens, the thoughtful and eloquent deejay on the television series, Northern Exposure, once rapped: There can be no spirituality, no sanctity, no truth . . . without the female sex. Consider The Daughters of Bluegrass 3 to be seventeen highly concentrated, almost lethal seeming at times, doses of spirituality, sanctity and truth. Tom T. and Dixie Hall, who long ago learned about whats important in life and how to transform those lessons into unforgettable songs, provide all the material. Some of Bluegrass-doms finest vocalists, including Beth Stevens, Frances Mooney, Valerie Smith, Lorraine Jordan, Dale Ann Bradley, Lisa Ray, Michelle Nixon, Heather Berry, Janet McGarry, Mindy Rakestraw, Beth Lawrence and Gena Britt bring the same to life. And what songs they are! Theres nail-drivin bluegrass, inspired old-time ballads, haunting gospel songs and everything in between. The Daughters take us to Carolina and away from Harlan; exhort us to let our lights shine and follow our dreams; remind us of the importance of family and the cycles of life: and show us the emptiness of riches and the power of love. Think of each song as a rose, iris, larkspur, handful of bear grass or button poms which, although each beautiful in its own right, fuse together to create the perfect bouquet. And be sure to join the girls on the spirited refrain: Im proud to be a daughter of bluegrass, dont you know Following the footsteps of Mr. Bill Monroe Playing at the festivals and on the radio Im proud to be a daughter and Im proud to tell you so Dave Higgs Nashville Public Radio
