Thoughtful, engaging lyrics delivered through memorable tunes in an occasionally retro style - 'pop' in the old sense of the word. 12 MP3 Songs POP: Beatles-pop, POP: British Pop Details: French Possession were formed during the early sessions of the 'Foil for a girl in a posh frock' album. As the band became more focussed and confident, new songs were written and the album began to take shape. Ironically, the new music is the first that you will hear. It reflects the backward-glancing disposition of the writer in the latter half of 2005. The second half of the album contains the earlier recordings: happy and sad songs about life, love and loss, written over a period of years and hence with a more retro feel. What you don't get on this album, though, are songs that sound the same. Steve Jones possesses a songwriting style that is versatile to say the least. Whether you prefer the beatle-esque quality of 'frail beauty', the happy-clappy blue grass feel of 'deep in the long grass', the dark electronica of 'wear and tear' or the classic pop that is the title track, there is undoubtedly something for everyone here. French Possession are: Steve Jones (guitar/vocals), Robert 'the kiddie' Burton (lead guitar/vocals), Bruno Newman (guitar/keyboards/vocals) and Briony Ace (vocals) 'Foil for a girl in a posh frock' was recorded at Resident Studios, London, England and produced by Bruno Newman. Chris from CD Baby said 'I really love your album title. I'd give it a listen solely based on that.' Punchline: The song - and album - delivers. Big time.
