Influenced in equal parts by the classic soul of the '60s, '70s and hardcore Hip-Hop, J-LYRIQ is a one man power house. Self taught producer and an amazing singer whos voice has the ability to capture his audience and hold their attention. 13 MP3 Songs URBAN/R&B: Rhythm Blues, URBAN/R&B: Contemporary urban Details: Detroit native J-LYRIQ is a gritty, urban contemporary/neo-soul singer, songwriter and self taught producer whose influences have ranged from Sam Cooke, Donny Hathaway, and Marvin Gaye to Jodeci, Brian Mcknight, and R. Kelly. Like other R&B artist who have emerged in the '90s and 2000s, J-Lyriq looks to different eras for inspiration. The classic soul of the '60s and '70s has had an impact on his singing and producing, but so have the urban contemporary and hip-hop of the '80s, '90s and 2000s. At times, J-Lyriq can be flat-out retro; some of his material would have been right at home on an old Motown LP from R&B's pre-'80s, pre-urban contemporary, pre-hip-hop era. But other times, he has a more modern, hip-hop-influenced outlook. In other words, he has some songs that are quite friendly to urban radio, and others that would be too old-school for urban radio. His goal is to not be able to be compared to any other artist. Born and raised in Detroit, MI (where he was the Last of Eight children), J-Lyriq had a very musical upbringing -- one that included a steady diet of R&B and Soul. When he wasn't performing gospel, J-Lyriq listened to secular soul and funk -- and his favorites included Sam Cooke, Otis Redding, Donny Hathaway, and the Gap Band. As a lead in his choir he had big dreams of World wide Fame.
