I am most content when I can retreat into my room, make a cup of coffee, turn the lights down low, and engross myself in the creation of something pure. I love music because it represents a noble, perhaps the most noble, element of our existence- emotional expression. How better to celebrate life than to lavish in the thing that makes us human? I am in my third year as a cadet and student at the United States Air Force Academy studying aeronautical engineering with hopes of becoming a pilot. As such, I spend every moment of my free time fighting to overcome the gaping void of artistic study in my schedule. I began experimenting with piano at 16, and my first real composition was Eagle's Peak for band. Since then, I have managed to improve my methods and tools, aspiring to achieve the most lifelike sound that I can. I have hopes of one day going to school to study music. My favorite composers include James Horner, John Williams, and Eric Whitacre. Perhaps you will hear their influence in my work. I would love to hear your comments or criticism. Thanks for visiting my site, I hope you enjoy it!
