Located in little Cache Valley, these five guys began making music with one common vision. It started with playing a lot of local shows and trying to build a fan base. They earned enough to head out to ASR and cut three demo tracks. Freedom Calling, Until I see You, and Secret Garden. These three song became hits in the community. After undergoing some minor changes, they began writing, and again out to the studio to track their single Drive. This song was intended to make the air waves in Denver, but the song went much further than that. With a few contacts and a little luck, Neversoft and Activision Entertainment heard Drive and wanted to include it on an up comming video game release, Tony Hawk's Underground. This has given Blind Iris world-wide recognition. The game was released and the journey began. Gamers and music lovers everywhere have taken a liking to Blind Iris, and the fans continue to grow everyday. The guys decided that the fans need a full length album, so they headed back to the studio and tracked eleven of their best songs and got the discs pressed. At the release show they were visited by Utah's Fox 13 news. Utah Idol presents Blind Irs. This along with the opportunity of playing on Fox 13's Morning show, has given Blind Iris some great time on camera. Since then they have continued to climb the ladder of success and turn heads wherever they play. There's no telling where Blind Iris will end up, but it's somewhere big.
