1 guitar - 2 strings = 1 incredibly fun toy that Keith Yanes uses to funk you in the ear through vibrations of catchy melodies and intricate grooves. 9 MP3 Songs JAZZ: Jazz Fusion, JAZZ: Latin Jazz Details: "His gadget of four will have you asking for more." -- Ears of peers. "Keith has played with numerous musicians around the Twin Cities. He has an uncanny ability to adapt himself to any musician, style, and situation. The musicians Keith has played with have all been stunned by his sheer talent and adaptability. Keith's performance style is very subtle and reserved. When he plays, he is a very humble performer and graciously accepts his applause. His audience is consistently mesmerized by his hypnotic melodies, and it remains impossible for them to keep their feet from tapping. Keith is constantly in a state of redefining his sound. He has a reservoir of creativity that has just begun to leak out. For this reason, he is very difficult to categorize into a genre. He has often been grouped into contemporary jazz, contemporary instrumental, or fusion, but in order to fully understand Keith's music, you must go see him yourself." -- Written by Dan Sarles of Crabwise Music. Keith Yanes performs contemporary instrumental music. His instrument of choice is the axe that hath but four strings: the bass guitar. Keiths music embraces music aspects from just about any part of the musical spectrum. He wants to try everything. He has composed Spanish tangos, classical preludes, and funky grooves. Keiths debut release Gadget of Four, released on Keiths co-founded label Crabwise Records out of Duluth, Minnesota, is a full-blown expression of music at its finest. Gadget of Four has the complexity of a Chic Corea or and Al DiMeola record, but also has the modern influence of Keller Williams with the use of looping bass and percussion tracks.
