Acoustic Folk/Blues in the old-time tradition. Uncle Dave's sound is heavily influenced by the folk performers of the early twentieth century like Mississippi John Hurt and Woody Guthrie 10 MP3 Songs FOLK: Folk Blues, FOLK: Traditional Folk Details: The highly praised debut collection of folk songs from emerging recording artist Uncle Dave Huber Dave's original songs have won praise from critics with their fresh take on traditional themes. "In the Deep Gray Snow" portrays lost love in an unearthly light and "Talking Orange Sunshine Explosion Blues" uses the traditional talking blues form to parody the American cultural climate of fear. The song Let the Mermaids Flirt with Me was written by Mississippi John Hurt and the ballad 1913 Massacre was written by Woody Guthrie. The first traditional tune, The Crawdad Song, is a one of the biggest crowd pleasers at Daves shows. It comes straight out of the Cajun country sung originally by African Americans of the early twentieth century as a blues known as Sweet Thing. Fiddlers and banjo pickers adapted the tune and lyrics to its current form although many variants exist. It is a timeless piece of American folk music with themes that are just as applicable today as they were years ago. The second track, Moonshiner, is another American folk song that is probably more popular today than ever. Through the combined efforts of Bob Dylan, Uncle Tupelo, Cat Power and many others this version of the song has achieved great notoriety among folk enthusiasts and singer/songwriter audiences.
