Details: Using modular synths, theramin, ring modulators, heavy reverb and plenty of echo, the new avant garde, electronic music artist, Antrilon, creates music that sounds like a soundtrack from a 60s Sci Fi B movie. Some of the songs border on being just sound effects and are even connected in story form almost begging for an indie filmmaker like Craig Baldwin to create a film around it. Primitive and stark, some of the music of Antrilon is eerily soothing and other pieces slowly drill into the center of your mind and make you question your sanity! To emphasize the primitive organic nature of the music, no MIDI, no laptops, no analog modeling, no emulators, no simulators and no samplers were used in the creation of this music. Antrilon uses real performers (no fruity loops or loop gurus) to play real synthesizers (no laptops) that are recorded onto analog tape 4 track recorder to create some rather unusual modern avant garde electronic music. Two pieces of music by Antrilon have already been used in two episodes of Food Jammers, an off the wall, Canadian cable TV cooking show. (foodjammers.com) The piece, Mind Erase by Antrilon, was on Episode 2025, We Be Illing, and Colliding Waves by Antrilon, was on Episode 2026, Mystery Food. Antrilon is essentially Greg Kozlowski who is known in the space rock, psychedelic, and progressive rock circles for his psychedelic, spacey, effects laden melodic guitar playing in the bands Architectural Metaphor and Secret Saucer. Recession buster price of only $8!!
