He was a founding member of Sorethumb, a band still performing today which he sometimes sit in with. Noodles has developed quite an extensive musical vocabulary. His original material covers many different styles and Noodles explains why. "I was never one to follow the latest trends, especially since most performers have such short lived careers. Plus the industry is always changing - noone has any idea whats good or bad anymore! They've put too many inexperienced people in charge of companies who don't know what good music is. I've always followed my gut - whatever style comes to me is what I pursue."
