Loose, countrified, and minimalistic. An acoustic fingerpickin' romp. 15 MP3 Songs FOLK: Traditional Folk, BLUES: Acoustic Blues Details: This was the first of a whole series of factory tapes (Which actually still exist and are now all available on CD's). This was the first one which had been still only available as a lowly cassette til now. This is kind of friendly-type music. Derek suggested I write something "good" in this section, but I don't really have anything really good like that at the moment, only some sooty-type things, so I'll just include this. It appears on the CD label of the Lefty Jones Band CD--Red Sails (that CD is available here on CDBaby also): One day the Wokey-bear got up and looked around his apartment. This made the wokey-bear sick, 'cause his apartment was too full of stuff that the small wokey-bear had brought home from his travels. Wokey bear decided to give some yonder things away to the more unfortunate bears, but they didn't want any of it, because they thought that Wokey-bear was the more unfortunate bear. This was an eye-opener for the Wokey-bear, indeed. Wokey got on the phone and called up his Plum who was living upstairs. "Plum," he said, "what's the hip-hop?" The Plum said that the job market was down, that there was in fact a real depression going on in the city and that the prospects of the Wokey-bear finding work were not too good, which made the Wokey-bear happy, because he had no real yonder intention of finding work anyway. To seek work, he would definitely go along with that, but to find, well, this was not the Wokey's mission. The Kodiak bear came over and they did a little cleaning together. Kodiak took the upstairs and the wokey-bear took the beware. Then they sauntered forth into the meadows. Moon fell on them. They recalled other pasteur moments, and swam in the silvery moments of their memories. (c) 1996, Jeff Harris That's about it for now. Have a great day!..., Lefty
