Smooth and subtle, yet delivered with such strength one becomes totally captivated. Reminiscent of an effervescent Patsy Cline, there is certainly nothing "Little" about this entertainer's energy and charisma. Growing up in the foothills of South Carolina, Michele was surrounded by many musical influences. From bluegrass to Elvis, from clogging at square dances every weekend to singing with her parents in the church choir, music runs deep in the veins of Michele Little. Michele worked as an entertainer at Dollywood and with the Okaysions to financially support her tenure at the University of South Carolina. "I never realized just how much of my life was entrenched in music until one of my college roommates asked me when I was going to turn off the radio or stop singing. Music was always on my mind, in my heart, and quite obviously in the ears of everyone around me!" Being placed on the waiting list for law school came as a sign to put her passion into motion, and Michele was Nashville bound. Not knowing a soul in town, Michele's work ethic and ambition was very quickly displayed when she began singing at Tootsie's Orchid Lounge, various well known honkytonks and has now achieved the status as a main attraction at The Stage on Broadway. This time of playing live and writing songs allowed Michele to hone her skills not only as a singer but as a musician. "I was told as a songwriter I had to know my 'major three', but even more imperative performance wise as a band leader I needed to know the chord progressions of my songs and be able to call them out in the Nashville number form when sitting in with various artists." In 2001, ironically the year which is the theme song of her alma mater, Michele released her first CD "That'd Be Me". By self promotion "That'd Be Me" and three cuts from the album have been played on airwaves across the land.

Drive and determination converted this dreamer into a visionary with high expectations in Music City. In the words of Michele Little, "I believe that one is not given a dream without also giving you the power to make that dream a reality." With her unique style and a complete package for success, this entertainer is definitely poised on the edge of that very reality.
