The Jason Martinko Revue was formed in late 1999. The three piece rock'n'roll band features Jason Martinko on vocals, guitar harmonica; Nate Fitzgerald on bass Jordan McMillen on drums. Jason S. Martinko, born April 19, 1979, began writing songs performing at a very early age. By the 1990s he had played countless solo performances in different bars, clubs, coffeehouses, parties, street corners other social events. In 1997, after graduating high school in Pittsburgh, Martinko went to Ocean City, Maryland with his friend Nate Fitzgerald, born January 20, 1979. Fitzgerald had played bass guitar in numerous punk bands while growing up. The two made a living playing together on the boardwalk nightly for tips. In time they made quite a name for themselves making headlines in local papers appearing in a TV commercial for an Ocean City bar. In 1998, they returned to Pittsburgh to record their first album entitled, "Soul Boy". Martinko Fitzgerald performed around Pennsylvania, Virginia Maryland to promote the cd. In 1999, Martinko met Jordan McMillen, born May 5, 1983. McMillen was a drummer in a blues band who was looking for an opening act for his band. Martinko played a few solo shows opening up for the band. He eventually introduced Fitzgerald to McMillen the three began to play together. By 2000, McMillen left his blues band The Jason Martinko Revue was born. That same year, they began to record a self-titled album that would not be finished until 2003. During this time The Jason Martinko Revue added many different members to the band, but the three piece core remained the same. The Jason Martinko Revue continues to tour, promoting their one-of-a-kind style of rock'n'roll music that relates to people of all ages, races colors. With their wide range of combined styles, no foot has gone untapped during any of their performances. Yet their style has still gone unclassified. They truly are a category of their own.
