The noble knight, Bram Croft, was determined to get his lands back and restore his family's name. He has fought battle after battle for the mad Baron Richard Kinghorn. And yet, it never seems to be enough to appease the Baron. It was tradition that the women warriors of Arcarndia hunt down their future mates from the warriors of the Rama village. Rhia, however, wanted a mate other than the Rama warriors. She obtains permission from the Domos to journey across the great sea and bring back a strong warrior. Rhia had all but given up on finding a warrior in this strange land until she spots Bram. Never had she seen a warrior such as him. He is what she wants for a mate. She drugs him and takes him back to Arcarndia. When Bram awakes in this savage land all he can think about is returning back to Adkins. The Baron would surely see Bram's absence as an act of treason and Bram's family will suffer. He is drawn to his beautiful captor. Never had he seen a warrior woman before, yet he must find a way back home. Bram's fears are very real for the Baron sends Michael, a cold merciless mercenary, to find and return Bram to him. Can love be found in this impossible situation or has Rhia made a mistake that will cost her and her people dearly?
