Juvenile by Design is an album of kid's music for kids who hate kids' music. It's fun, frantic, and diverse without being patronizing or dumbed-down. There's wacky storytelling, in songs about Dolphin/Goat duets and the misadventures of an Auctioneer. 7 MP3 Songs in this album (27:08) ! Related styles:

KIDS/FAMILY: General Children's Music, KIDS/FAMILY: Children's Storytelling Details: These songs came about in Boston in the winter of 2006, when Ezra Sykes decided to write songs for his nieces and nephews, and asked his friend David Brodie to help. Over the course of the month they put together 7 songs, then sought and received the help of a handful of friends to sing, play banjo, do pirate voices, and add to the general madness of the songs. Ezra and David sent out the album as Christmas presents, took a deep breath (or, individual deep breathes), and thought that was the end of it. As more and more people passed the songs to family and friends, the album began to take on a life of its own. Deciding that the popularity should be put to good use, the guys decided to have the song professionally mastered and manufactured. Please enjoy these songs! But we don't recommend taking them, or their makers (or life in general) too seriously.
