Details: The music of Anne and Pete Sibley is so powerful that whenever you hear one of their songs, you have to stop everything else you are doing, and listen. -John Adair, Artistic Director, MerleFest One of the sweetest, most soulful and hauntingly beautiful duets in the business" - Bluegrass Now Magazine Their harmonies are warm, tight and soulful; and their performances simple, poignant and unforgettable. - Nashville Public Radio For Anne and Pete it is the simplicity of the music: the words, the vocals, the harmonies. The storytelling and intimate nature of their originals has drawn in fans and encouraged the husband and wife duo to keep delivering. They aren't afraid of making music that is personal, paring it down, being true to their instincts. The audiences and the communities and the correspondence from their fans in five short years has made it so rewarding for the couple. Raised in New England singing in choirs, studying all types of music except folk and bluegrass, the Sibleys stumbled upon their true calling when they moved out West to the land of the Tetons. They consider this music the people's music, nature's music and they sing it freely and graciously. They Performed on the NPR Radio program A Prairie Home Companion in April 2009. In the past five years they have recorded four well-received albums (including one for Christmas) and will be celebrating their newest release in April 2009. Of Will You Walk With Me, Bluegrass Now writes, What emerges front and center are the couples transcendent harmonies, vocal renditions that embellish already artful songwriting." They have also self-published a songbook of their original music.
