She and her mother had moved next door during a relatively unhappy time in his life. This exceptionally beautiful child, Sara, barged into his world and insisted on her very own place in it. The friendship between the three of them led to a pivotal event that occurred while they were at a theater watching the animated movie, Peter Pan. Sara started to sing. She had recognized a song in the movie. The idea was born in the producer's mind to write a song just for her. He completed and recorded it a short time later. That song eventually found its way to an executive producer at Walt Disney Records, who (like everyone) loved it. This led to years of being invited by Walt Disney Records to write songs for various projects in the making. And the habit (and love) of creating delightful music for kids was born. Most impressive to the makers of DUKE and the Winter ANIMALS are the preliminary reactions from parents that tell how their children SAT STILL from the beginning of it until the end, listening attentively (something these parents would never have expected from them) and spontaneously singing along. Nothing but excited, honest, joyful reactions from kids have been communicated. The CD has embedded values (highlighted in Duke London's live performances-with his Koala, Jimbo) that include appreciation for parents, a warning about trusting strangers, the joy of giving, and the need to get along with others. Rainbows and Miracles Productions is very proud to introduce for your enjoyment: DUKE and the Winter ANIMALS!
