Details: Kate Linn is an artist who has never been afraid to stand on both sides of the fence. Her debut EP walks the line between guitar-heavy pop and piano-driven blues, colored with an aggressive indie-rock tinge that integrates the record into a fresh and infectious whole. The subject matter of the EP is diverseKate alternates between musing about the trials of appearing composed in the face of hardship ("The Pretty Girl"), pleading for conflict resolution in relationships ("Where I Fell"), and chronicling the excitement of new love ("Sidewalks"). The lyrics are insightful and literary, yet she maintains an accessible honesty that is universally appealing. Her addictive hooks and gutsy vocal delivery shine on fast-paced numbers such as "Sidewalks" and "Where I Fell," betraying an adolescent love of female-fronted bands such as No Doubt and Garbage. Her ballads are pensive and sincere, with a soulful vocal style that subtly echos one of her favorite artists, Fiona Apple. She's not shy about citing Fiona as an influence, saying, "She was the reason that I took up the piano again after quitting my lessons in third grade. Tidal came out when I was in middle school, and it was the only record I would listen to. My parents bought me the sheet music, and I went through and painstakingly learned every songI had to re-learn to read music to even get started." When asked about her career goals, Kate also plans to walk the line between the creative world and the business world. "Making music is my first loveit always has been. But, one day, I would like to be able to help other people do what I'm trying to do right now---make songwriting and performing a career." Producing records for other acts and starting a publishing company are both on her eventual to-do list, but at present she is entirely focused on her own musical ventures. "It was a huge step for me to even admit to myself that I couldn't let go of my dream of becoming a performer and songwriter. My first real job was at an artist management company in Nashville, because that's the career I thought I wanted to have. Slowly, it became apparent to me that I was wrong...I couldn't abandon this idea of becoming an artist, so I realized I needed to just go for it and make a record. However, I had already used up all my vacation time." She laughs. "So, I had to quit. And let me tell you, I have never been more scared in my life." Now, with one project under her belt that's garnering rave reviews from a rapidly growing and diverse audience, Kate doesn't regret her choice in the slightest. "I feel more strongly now than ever that this is what I was born to do. I just love, love, love writing songs. I love being able to take an experience, either good or bad, and turn it into something that can connect with people in a way that mere conversation can't." Kate is currently putting the majority of her efforts into rehearsal with her band, and is readying herself to launch onto the regional live music scene. With an untiring work ethic and a sound all her own, she is rapidly becoming an artist that makes people stand up and take notice.
