It was in Florida where he got involved in the rap game, accompanying his boys to the recording studio.... ' I just felt the music callin..', he says . In 1994, Dutch recorded his first demo, a dancehall tune called 'Healthy and Strong' which was licensed for a compilation on an independent label out of Ft. Lauderdale, Fla. This song gave him credibility in his city and surroundings, so that served as a catalyst for a career in the music industry. He toured the clubs and schools in South Florida opening up for many acts including Capleton, Sanchez, Heavy Dee and the The Fugees, before they were 'The Fugees', making a favorable impression on Wyclef Jean who invited Dutch to come to 'The Bugga Basement'. So in the spring of 1995 Karlito moved to East Orange, New Jersey. In NJ, feeling right at home, Dutch started to learn to do his own production, watching Wyclef at work, he began putting together tracks for his first album. Then tragedy hit home hard; Dutch lost his father in 1996, so he decided to go back to Jamaica to help out the rest of the family and ended up staying there for two years. By the time he got back to NJ, the Fugees had gotten their break and moved to New York. So he decided to move back to Brooklyn. There he started his own label 'Streetrunnuz Records' and released a slew of singles including the hits 'Healthy and Strong' and 'Dream Lover', a song which features Beeni Man. These sold well on the streets and he continued to play in clubs all over New York. Then in 2000 he recorded 'That little Boy' which still receives acclaim in the hip hop circles and is the lead single on his premier compilation project entitled The HIP-HOP ALLIANCE which features the collaboration of the best artists in the D.C.metro area which he now resides. Then came "We Got Nexx" featuring his group T.R.E. Produced by the TuneRaiduz, his three man production team from Northern Virginia, this 14 song gem shows the total package that Dutch Diamond brings to the table: lyrical flowess, Ragga chants and banging beats.
