Details: Portrait of a Warrior is the brainchild of the University of Nebraska at Omahas Dr. Franklin Thompson, a professor of race and human relations. Dont let his professional credentials scare you; Dr. T. is a homeboy from the projects that knows how to "get a little jiggy wit it." The genius of Warrior is that it proves that urban music doesn't have to be dumbed-down in order for it to be relavent. Thompson (aka, Franois Jaboi and Goldenthroat) is one of independent music's leading writers of songs with a social message. He is also the architect of the genre of music known as the Selah Sounda unique style of educational music set to funk, pop, and hip-hop beats. The uniqueness of the Selah Sound is that it encourages you to think, while it also makes you dance. Warrior is essentially volume one of Thompsons greatest hits that span a 28-year period between 1981-2009. A volume two and three of his music is also scheduled to be released in 2009. In particular, Warrior highlights those songs that have human relations, love, family, and living in the hood themes. It is an educational tool that also has great entertainment value; something that can be marketed to a wide audience. This album has something for everyone. For example, if you like: Traditional Funk from the early 1980s, you will enjoy tracks 1 and 10; Early 1990s R&B Funk tracks 3, 5, 7, 9, and 18; A Hip-Hop/Rap Mixture tracks 4, 6, 8, and 17; Childrens Hip-Hop Rap track 15; Adult Contemporary tracks 13, 14, and 16; R&B Jazz track 2; 1980s Pop Synthesizer Jazz track 12; and 1980s Rock-n-Roll Pop track 11. A strong lyrical foundation laced with infectious beats is another way of describing Thompsons contribution to the music world. He is able to take traditional themes that might be viewed by some as square and turn them into a hip hook line. The artist sets a new standard for independent writers with the release of Warrior. Kudos to Dr. Thompson for utilizing his musical talents to help bring about a positive difference in his community! Urban oriented independent music doesnt get any better than this folks. This 18-song, hit-filled CD is the real deal. Whoever thought the genesis of the next music innovation would come out of the Heartland. Catch the spirit of a whole new thing coming out of Omaha, NE. After purchasing your own personal copy, tell others about it. Portrait of a Warrior is the right piece to add to your music collection, as well as a perfect gift to send to a friend.
