Details: "Make Me Happy, Make Me Blue," is the debut album of singer/songwriter Meghan Beaudry. Meghan had her first tastes of songwriting in the casual environment of her home. Growing up she and her family would play and write songs together as a pastime. At the age of 14, Meghan began seriously writing her own songs about her life experiences and what she observed in those around her. In fact, the second track on the album, All Alone, was one of the first songs she wrote. Her ambition to record was delayed but not deterred as she worked through other goals and personal hurdles. Then at the age of 19 as she was getting ready to graduate from college, she sought out a studio where she could record a demo in hopes of pursuing a music career. This is when she found Signature Sounds Studio and met recording engineer Mark Thayer. After meeting Mark, he introduced her to accomplished musician and singer/songwriter Steven Santoro. A few months later, after Meghan had graduated from college, they began collaborative work, writing and crafting many of these songs together. Meghan has a broad display of vocal color that is both vibrant and angelic. Her remarkable voice and soulful phrasing paints an image that will carry you through the story. The lyrics draw on both the solitude and playfulness of life, bringing your mind and your heart along for the ride. Meghans debut album captures her wide range of ability and welcomes the listener to a refreshing escape.
