They Didn't Just Write the Sexual News - They Made It! Charlotte Holding leaves a small regional town, an overbearing father and a boring suitor to find a new future in the big city. She is elated to be signed up by the glamorous Editor-in-Chief, Stella De Palo, as a writer on the country's leading women's magazine, WHAM. The staff writers of WHAM are a mixed bunch of sensitive, artistic people each striving for meaningful love in their private lives and satisfaction in their profession. The Deputy Editor, Derek O'Toole, blue-eyed, tousled-haired Irish hunk of a man treats blonde and beautiful Charlotte as . . . business only, thank you. But, work opportunities bring them together and they consummate their relationship with wild, sensual sex. Within WHAM, sensual relationships bloom and fade. Late one night, Charlotte hears the unmistakable sounds of love making from Stella's office. Her heart pounds as she thinks it could be Derek but is relieved when Roger, a senior editor with a reputation for roving hands, leaves Stella's office with a smile on his face. Holly and Bernard are screwing each other's brains out and even the Celebrities writer, inscrutable Jenny Tang, has a permanent smile on her face, no doubt due to handsome young Josh Crossley. Everyone, it seems, is having relationships except one Charlotte

Holding . . . Home alone, Charlotte is startled by the buzzer. Is it boring Bernard again? Or is it him, Derek. Her heart sings with excitement, with anticipation, as she buzzes the caller in. Rae Clark writer lives in Brisbane, Australia and is the author of non-fictional historical material for the Australian government and published writer of short fiction, articles, essays and book reviews for a wide variety of consumer magazines, literary journals and newspapers.
