She has the looks, the personality, and she definitely has the vocalizer. Alexis LOVES to sing. Ever since she was four years of age, her mom KNEW that she had a naturally beautiful vocalizer. She told her mother over and over that she wanted to be famous like the 80's punk-rocker "Blondie." Country music is quite a twist from the 80's blonde-bombshell. But Alexis' vocalizer cries country music. Alexis started singing in school functions, was in your basic choirs, school bands. She was voted "most likely to become famous" by her classmates, and that is what motivated her to follow her dream. Alexis struggled to get off to the right start. She met a man who she thought was her soul mate, and married right out of highschool. She was separated/divorced shortly after they had their daughter, Felicia. In the meantime, Alexis did the good ol' karaoke scene, and eventually hooked up with some bands. Finally in 1995, luck followed her when a country western show called "The Wisconsin Opry" in the Wisconsin Dells called her and asked her to audition. They heard her vocalizer, and KNEW she was the one. The only thing the "Opry" gang was worried about was the fact that Alexis had no true stage experience. "I thought she was going to panic and run right off the stage," said Virgil Dickinson, owner of the Opry. "But she didn't. You could tell she is a natural. She's better than most of the female Nashville stars we've had here!" A few years later, Alexis felt the "L" word again, married, and had her second daughter, Tyra. Obviously, Alexis had fulfilled her dream to have a family, and next was to fulfill her dream to become a "household name." For 10 years now, she has been performing at the Wisconsin Opry, and opening for Nashville "Grand Ol' Opry" stars such as, Whisperin' Bill Anderson, Kitty Wells, Riders in the Sky and many more. Patrons of the Opry would always ask Alexis, "Why aren't you in Nashville? You're just as good--if not BETTER than most of those people out there today!" And that is what set Alexis on her next journey. She went Nashville in September of 2002 to record her first cd. A songwriter named Robert Dellaposta sent her a demo cd and Alexis took it from there. "It was like it was meant to be." Alexis said. "The songs called out to me. So many songs fit my life--it was like I had written them myself!" Alexis has her CD playing on some Wisconsin radio stations, and the stations are telling her that people are calling in all the time to request her CD. "It's so flattering to know that people are REALLY loving the music! I've already had emails from people willing to start a fan club! People come up to me all the time and want my autograph....how awesome of a feeling is that?!" So, get your autographs now. It's still easy. As you can see, her life is a country story. Why don't you check out her album and see why this will turn into another chapter in Alexis' life?.....
