American roots music 9 MP3 Songs COUNTRY: Outlaw Country, FOLK: Folk Blues Show all album songs: Three Chords The Truth Songs Details: I was born and raised in Milwaukee, Wisconsin on the 26th of April, 1979. A great city on a great lake. My great-great grandparents came to this country from Poland and Germany in search of a new life. Milwaukee is a blue collar town. My father is a third generation barber and my mother is a retired elementary school teacher. I used to listen to my parent's old vinyl collection. They mostly had classical music and movie soundtracks from the 1960's and 1970's. I started playing the Alto Saxophone around the age of ten, only to give it up after four years to concentrate on athletics. Football, baseball, track and field. I was even fortunate enough to play four seasons of college football for the Universities of Wisconsin-Oshkosh and Whitewater. Music was something that accompanied my life growing up. I would listen to rock and roll, blues, jazz, classical, country, folk, bluegrass, reggae and soul music. My roommate in college played an acoustic guitar and I wanted one too. My father had an old Japanese classical guitar in his attic, so I took it, put some new strings on and was off and running. I started playing along to artists that I dug, trying to learn some songs. House of the Rising Sun, Blowin' in the Wind and Folsom Prison Blues are just a few that come to mind. Songs about living with nothing to lose. I also started reading Hemingway, Kerouac and other great American writers. For whatever reason, I began writing poetry as well. Social commentary, longing for love, things of that nature. Naturally, playing guitar and writing poetry came together. The number of songs I began to write soon outnumbered the so-called cover songs I was singing and playing. I graduated college in 2002 and got myself a steady job working for a manufacturing company. I moved into a small one bedroom apartment and just tried to make ends meet. My songwriting became something confessional as opposed to professional. Certain things in my life such as love and love lost, America, God, Wisconsin and the blue collar dollar became subject matter. My album, Three Chords The Truth, is a documentation of these past half-dozen years. I've decided that I'm in this for the long-haul. I currently live in Milwaukee with my wife, Teri Lynn, and my dog, Seamus. These nine songs are the beginning of a lifelong journey to personal freedom. I hope you enjoy. Justin Scott
