Self-taught in voice, guitar, keyboards and harmonica at a very young age, Kelly was moved by rock-n-roll rhythm, but somehow felt a need to enhance the melodic aspect of rock. The result: a unique and sonically distinctive fusion of pop, rock and soul, somewhere between U2, Coldplay and The Beatles that appeals to fans of all ages and walks of life. With an enormous range, both vocally and stylistically, Kelly delivers polished, soulful acoustic balladry at times, and powerful, rocking, hook-laden hits that he sings with an emphatic honesty that is hard to find and a technical ability that's even tougher to beat. He has performed live on internationally syndicated television for both The Roseanne Show and Regis Kathy Lee and has had the honor of singing the "National Anthem" for the Los Angeles Lakers and Los Angeles Kings games. the Top 40 charts, tracked by New Music Weekly Magazine, and in 2003 he was the only independent artist that was nominated as Male Artist of the Year alongside Eminem, John Mayer, Uncle Kracker and Nelly.
