FOLK: Folk Blues, FOLK: Power-folk Details: Joining forces after the break-up of successful folk-rock outfit Ragtrade, Winter Wilson have built a reputation for beautiful songs, beautifully sung. Kip Winter has sung a variety of types of music, including traditional folk, jazz and classical, but is never happier than with contemporary folk and blues, where her voice is at its best, showing both power and emotion. Dave Wilson writes finely crafted songs on subjects as diverse as love, war, and getting old, not forgetting scenes from his native Lincolnshire. Already described by the BBC's Tom Lane as "in the very top tier of British songwriters", Dave's songs are now heard in Folk Clubs across Britain and beyond. From the release of their first album "by the skin of our teeth" in 1997, to their third "I hear voices sing" (February 2004), Winter Wilson have never failed to impress, and their live performances have delighted audiences across the country. Powerful lyrics combine with superb harmonies to produce songs to remember. Winter Wilson are the perfect combination; two great voices and a wealth of great songs.. "Not just another duo - Winter Wilson really are something special" Chris Hawkins, BBC Radio 6 Music.
