Guitar chords reveal reflections Of moments passed by times resolve. And the storyteller dances Within verses; subtle moments. A portrait of George Wirth at The Indigo Coffeehouse, March 2005. (2005 Scott Wolman. Used by permission.)) Some people seem to make strong connections to my songs and I try to respect that when I'm doing them. Without, I hope, taking myself too seriously in the process. I did my best to pass that feeling on in this CD. This project started out as a way to keep track of some songs and maybe learn a little about the art of recording along the way. It evolved into a collection that, I think, has an unaffected, organic feel to it. I added a bit of harmonica and high-strung second guitar on some tunes but it's still a pretty accurate reflection of what I sound like playing live. The sound clips of all 13 songs speak for themselves and they'll give you a better idea of what I do than anything I could write in this space. Please take a minute to check 'em out. Lyrics and more information can be found at my website. Thanks for stopping by and listening. Take care. George Wirth
