

Mp3 Christopher Mast - If I Told You, I'd Have To Kill You

DOWNLOAD HERE

Christopher Mast is a singer / songwriter influenced by Warren Zevon, Elvis Costello, Eels, and Johnny Cash with a recorded sound similar to Barenaked Ladies. Released 2005. 16 MP3 Songs ROCK: Acoustic, POP: Quirky Details: "Intimate acoustic songs from a promising one-man-band... Great songwriter nice production." - Hybrid Magazine / June 2005 "Mast's lyrics are not without charm... people-watching pays off eloquently..." "Witty" - Indie-Music/ June 2005 "All the ingredients for something really tasty!" - Gods of Music One of the "Best Unsigned" acts - Soundclick About me: As a kid, I was exposed to music almost every day. My dad loved to blast the speakers on his complicated and expensive stereo. David Bowie, Steve Miller, Kiss, Fleetwood Mac, Styx, Alice Cooper, Queen, Black Sabbath, and Pink Floyd were frequent guests in our house (in spirit). I was a teenager in the 80s. Back then, Duran Duran was all the rage. I was more interested in exploring the depths of my Hendrix, Led Zepplin, and Clapton albums. When I first picked up a guitar, it was ROCK that I wanted to play, no matter how unpopular it was at the time. I've built my solo acoustic act on these foundations. My current favorites include Cake, Warren Zevon, Johnny Cash, and Eric Clapton. I've been told I sound like Lindsay Buckingham or "if Sheryl Crow were a man." It's a bit less raucous than Kiss, but I still call it rock and roll.

DOWNLOAD HERE

Similar manuals: