Details: "Stopping By Woods On A Snowy Evening" is probably the best-known poem by America's best-known poet, Robert Frost. Though Robert Frost himself never revealed its meaning, the poem is believed by many to be about Santa Claus as he takes a brief rest to admire the beauty and peacefullness of a snowfall in the forest on "the darkest evening of the year," just before Christmas Eve - just before taking on the task of visiting all the children and fulfilling his "promises to keep." The music John has written and the soft seasonal arrangement he has wrapped it in complement Frost's poem by capturing the deep, peaceful mood it creates. "Stopping By Snowy Woods" is one of those songs that will sound familiar the first time you hear it. John is a full time broadcast meteorologist and part-time singer/songwriter living in Indiana.
