Details: About Kevin Fallon Singer, songwriter and multi-instrumentalist-- Originally from Missouri, Kevin Fallon has spent a lifetime writing, recording and playing music. A published songwriter, Kevin manages his own studio, The Green House and owns Northwest Guitars, a premier guitar store in Bellevue, Washington. Kevin began playing guitar at age 8 and hasn't put it down since. By the time he was eleven years old, he had formed his first band, the Illusions, and recorded his first record. Graduating from high school, he moved to California to play folk rock music during the end of the '60s. The seventies found him living in Wyoming working as a guide, trapper and cowboy while playing country music in the bars and honky-tonks at night. Moving to San Francisco later that decade, Kevin formed the rock band, American Standard with Pablo Crusie bass player/singer Bruce Day and world class singer and front man, Kevin Chalfant and recorded at the famed Record Plant and Fantasy Studios. Always restless, in 1983 he again moved, this time to Seattle just in time for the grunge music scene. He was a founding member of the blues/rock band The Blind which was described as "Motown meets Cream" and was a mainstay of the Seattle music scene for 10 years. Kevin's music clearly shows the influences of folk, rock, country and blues and has been described as "pure American roots music". He has had numerous original songs recorded and performed by local and national artists over the years. He continues to perform, write and record his songs. "All in good time" is Kevin's first solo CD and contains some of the best of his original material.
