With a music-filled childhood and substantial performing pedigree, Lisa Ostrow has created her own unique sound, with her solo debut album, "Unconditional." A dynamic mix of playful jazz, soothing ballads and haunting theatrical gems, this recording holds great promise for a unique and refreshing new artist. Totally blind since birth, Ostrow grew up surrounded by the harmonies of professional musicians, and displayed both talent and poise even in childhood as a singer and pianist. As an adult, her special artistry migrated to a focus on vocal performance, as evidenced by the polished, nuanced work in "Unconditional," which was co-produced with Ostrows arranger and sound engineer, Patrick Dreier, for Out of the Blue Records. "Unconditional" includes backing vocals on two of the tracks, provided by Lisas husband and children and Dreier and his daughters, all performers from a variety of disciplines, in addition to contributions from a number of exceptional Boston and Rhode Island-area professional musicians. A preliminary release of the first track, Once Upon A Time, was featured on the National Federation of the Blind, Performing Arts Divisions first CD release in July 2007, entitled "Sound in Sight," and was selected from a nationwide call for submissions.
