Details: Andrea Milana, born in Gela (Italy) in 1978, is signed at S.I.A.E. (the Italian Society for Authors and Editors) since 1998 as author and composer. Music and computer science are his experimentation field. He studied pianoforte and classic guitar, but also programming languages and electronic music, passing through every possible contamination between them. For two years, the territory of these experimentations has been his own recording studio, Percezioni Digitali, opened in Gela in 2001. Afterwards he has worked for Ediroi Direct Italia, a Roland's group society, in Milan (2004-2007). This job brought him a deeper knowledge of electronic music and computer science both, as website developer. He recently moved to Malta, where he finished the new mix of Polymateric, his latest album. His work leads the path from electronic sonorities to vintage ones, with some fusion influences. Main influences for him are: Jean Michel Jarre, Kraftwerk, Pink Floyd, Jeff Lorber, Pat Metheny, Weather Reports, and the vintage sound of the '70s and '80s.
