Details: Howard Letovsky's Traffic Violator School reached number 1 on a Country Music Indie Chart, and A real Man like Mon hit number 4 when the tunes were first released back in the 1990's. Line dances were created around Real Man and a chain of California Traffic schools handed out thousands of the CDs as graduation prizes. The songs were played on several thousand country stations and Howard graced the cover of Gavin Magazine - a country radio trade publication. A Little Bit Country, A little Bit Weird, is a polished production collection of humorous and well crafted serious songs that embody a musical blend of country and reggae rhythms peppered with jazz, rockabilly, and gospel elements. A Real Man Like Mom describes a young man coming to grips with his parents simultaneous sex change operations. Cost Of Love is a cynical synopsis of the monetary results of divorce. Even the more raunchy cuts like Calypso Maladies will have listeners singing along - although the lyrics may cause some people emotional distress. Howard Letovsky is a song writer, musician, producer - as well as a succesful inventor with many issued US patents that include missile defense systems, thermal differential engines that use shape memory alloys to generate power from hot air, hot water, cold air, and cold water, motion simulators for flight training and entertainment, virtual reality displays, and advanced slot machine gaming systems. His pending patents include radioactive waste neutralization systems, habit elimination methods for smoking and narcotics addictions, and advanced interactive slot gaming and skill equalization systems for the casino gambling industry. He was featured on the Discovery Channel show Beyond 2000 for building the worlds first Electric Police Car, and in the last few years has designed and developed Plug-In Hybrid Mileage Enhancement systems that can integrate with any hybrid gas electric vehicle to increase mileage to 100 MPG over distances from 25 to 100 miles. He has also built dozens of photovoltaic and solar thermal systems, designed large scale recycling systems, and constructed over one hundred street legal and off road electric vehicles. Howard has produced and directed national TV commercials, news segments for CBS, NBC, and ABC networks, and was a television comedy segment writer, performed live improvisation at the Comedy Store in L.A., was awarded an Independent Film Maker grant from the American Film Institute.
