Tanya Brody and Matthew Gurnsey play 10 instruments between the two of them. Tanya is just as likely to strum the guitar or hit the hammered dulcimer as she is to pluck the harp. Matt is as happy playing his concertina as he is the bowed psaltery or will rattle away at the bones or toot a pennywhistle. They also have a mandolin, an acoustic bass and a Bodhran, all of which both can play. Add to this their wonderful vocal harmonies and you have an act well worth listening to. The Muses travel all over the country playing at Scottish Games, Renaissance Festivals, Folk Festivals, libraries, colleges and other venues. Their strong passion both in their music and for each other comes across in their playing, whether you're listening to an upbeat tune or a slow love ballad. Tramps and Hawkers is the debut album from The Muses, Tanya Brody and Matthew Gurnsey.
