Inspired by slapstick humor and blues from long before any of us were born, 11 MP3 Songs FOLK: Power-folk, ELECTRONIC: Pop Crossover Details: Koppen: Truckdrivin' Songs Koppen is Tppas Strepens younger brother, and his music is Japan-o-file cartoon-infected cut-up folk. Inspired by slapstick humour and blues from long before any of us were born, Koppen is raising sample-, and banjohell togther with his producer Sissyfus. A ridiculous amount of coffee was consumed before recording and writing this album. K o p p e n (the field-hollering-candy-robot) Koppen joined the Metronomicon-collective in 2003, when he released his first CD-R entitled Truck drivin' songs, a title which was in fact stolen from a cassette bought at a flee market. The songs were mainly made on a computer using a sequencer and an extensive collection of silly samples, but also with the use of acoustic instruments like banjo and melodica. Koppen displays a wide range of musical influences, ranging from scary industrial sounds to circus-music. Theres also a certain leaning towards more traditional folk music, which one probably can trace back to Koppens past as a ramblin' man and folk singer. Koppen is a one-man-band. However, he has always worked in close proximity to producer Sissyfus (aka the Center of the Universe). Their collaboration is even more apparent on the latest release My fashion statement is scrambled eggs, yet another title stolen from somewhere else. As a patron of Japanese popular culture, Koppen occasionally spends some time in Japan. On one of his trips he happened to meet a young boy that explained to him that his fashion statement was scrambled eggs, whatever thats supposed to mean.
