Its available now as an mp3-download and limited-edition CD at pacificcoastband.com, CDBaby.com, select music retailers and coming soon to iTunes. No ProTools here, says Patrick William Horn, songwriter-producer for the Los Angeles indie acoustic rock-n-roll ensemble. The musicians played live in the studio together, the vocalists lined up around a single microphone. Many of the lyrics are adapted from classic poetry, says Horn, who studied literature with a Harvard scholar. Nothing is more inspiring than reading Wordsworth and Whitman on a retreat in the California wilderness. The core of the ensemble formed at one of L.A.s best-kept secrets, Kulaks Woodshed. The Woodshed is a unique treasure thats almost always in danger of vanishing, says Horn. Its an intimate venue with a live audio-video Webcast for artists to share their musickept alive by volunteers and a donation bucket. With over 16,000 friends and more than 24,000 listens, the ensemble ranks #22 among local acoustic artists on Myspace. The group also shared their organic sound at sold-out shows on the Sunset Strip, including headlining the legendary Whisky-A-Go-Go. Says Horn, Suddenly, we had an adoring crowd of dancing fans, who screamed, waved lighters and threw underwear at us. Thats a rock-n-roll dream come true.
